

Anika to Showcase Joint Preservation and Restoration Portfolio at the 2019 Fortius International Sports Injury Conference

BEDFORD, Mass.--(BUSINESS WIRE)--Nov. 5, 2019--Anika Therapeutics, Inc. (NASDAQ: ANIK), a global, integrated joint preservation and regenerative therapies company with products leveraging its proprietary hyaluronic acid \("HA"\) technology platform, today announced plans to showcase its osteoarthritis pain management and joint preservation and restoration regenerative therapies at the 2019 Fortius International Sports Injury Conference (FISIC). The 2019 FISIC is being held November 6-7, 2019 in London, England and will focus on the latest practices in orthopedics and sports injury medicine for orthopaedic surgeons, sports physicians, radiologists, physiotherapists, and other sports and exercise professionals. The conference will feature multidisciplinary panels composed of over 130 experts discussing the latest evidence-based insights in the field of sports medicine.

“Orthopedic sports medicine and sports-related injuries are an important focus for Anika, given our extensive portfolio of treatments to address the joint preservation and restoration continuum of care, from managing joint pain related to everyday and sports-related wear and tear to repairing cartilage defects,” said Joseph Darling, President and Chief Executive Officer of Anika Therapeutics. “We look forward to engaging with sports medicine specialists at this year’s FISIC, as we focus on broadening our portfolio of regenerative therapies .”

Anika will be a silver sponsor of this year’s conference. The company will showcase its HYALOFAST regenerative therapy, in addition to holding physician training sessions for its viscosupplement portfolio, including CINGAL, at booth #2.
